Dr Patricia Grocott PhD BSc(Hons DipN (Lon) RGN

Reader in Palliative Wound Care King’s College London
2014-12-01

Patricia is a Reader in Palliative Wound Care at King’s College London in the Florence Nightingale Faculty of Nursing and Midwifery.

She is working on a programme of translational research involving the co-design and development of medical devices and systems of care for people who are vulnerable to skin damage, including patients with palliative wound care needs.

The focus is on using patients’ and clinicians’ experiences of devices and healthcare systems to identify their shortfalls and to work with patients, designers and industry to co-design devices and systems to meet personal needs and the needs of health care systems and providers.
